We offer a range of training courses to cover all your image analysis needs from basic image manipulation to advanced image analysis, from explaining camera technology to image enhancements and from creating settings files to writing macros.

Our basic training course is a must for new users, and the Advanced and Camera training courses are great for discovering the full potential of your systems.

Basic Measurements Course

The Basic Measurements training course is targeted at new users, users who haven't used Image-Pro for a while and users who have recently upgraded to the latest version of the software. In it we cover the basics of camera technology and image manipulation as well as image analysis and measurement. This course is run bi-monthly due to the high demand for basic training.

Advanced Training Course

The Advanced training course is intended for those users familiar with Image-Pro, who use it frequently and are looking for ways to maximise their productivity. In this course, users will learn how to leverage the power of macros and settings files as well as other Image-Pro tools to generate more data, more efficiently, enabling user to concentrate on the interpretation of that data rather than get bogged down in the acquisition. This course is run quarterly for experienced users who have already attended the Basic Training Course.

Most of our courses are held at Moor Hall, a dedicated facility in beautiful surroundings in Cookham, Buckinghamshire. With easy access from London and the Midlands and only a 30min journey from Heathrow airport, it is a great place to work. The site also offers accommodation with discounted pricing for attendees wishing to be fresh and best prepared for the training course.

Course Format

All sessions are hands-on and interspersed with opportunities to ask for help with specific needs. The training course is run with groups of 4-8 attendees, allowing every attendee time to ask questions and get one to one attention from the trainer ensuring that everyone gets as much as possible from the sessions. Each attendee will also be provided with a full print out of course content with plenty of space for additional notes.
